Each year, 20 outstanding second-year, undergraduate students from a variety of disciplines are selected to become the new generation of University Scholars.

Each University Scholar
• receives a one-time scholarship of $1,500;
• is paired with a faculty mentor; and
• enrolls in an interdisciplinary seminar taught by a faculty member who is noted for their distinguished teaching record.

Spring 2018 University Scholars Seminar:
"Herman Melville’s America: Studying Inequality, Literature, and History"

The University Scholars seminar will be taught by Distinguished Professor and Chairperson David Roediger of the Department of American Studies.

Students in their second year at KU with a strong academic record (about a 3.75 GPA) are encouraged to apply. University Scholars are selected on the basis of: academic credentials; commitment to their education; intellectual promise; involvement outside of the classroom; and evaluations by instructors, advisers, and other faculty members.

Apply at: honors.ku.edu/university-scholars by: September 21st

The Global Scholars Program, housed in the Office of International Programs is a sibling program to the University Scholars Program; students may apply for only one of these two programs.
